

Aisha Al-Sarihi is a non-resident fellow at the Arab Gulf States Institute in Washington. Her research interests include the political economy, policy and politics of energy, renewable energy and climate change, with a focus on the Arab region. She obtained her Ph.D. at Imperial College's Centre for Environmental Policy. Her thesis focused on studying the policies and politics for renewable energy adoption in oil-producing countries. Following her Ph.D., Aisha pursued her postdoctoral research at the London School of Economics and Political Science's Middle East Centre, working on assessing the economic implications of climate change in the GCC. She also joined the Arab Gulf States Institute in Washington, studying the challenges and opportunities for aligning climate policies with economic diversification strategies in Saudi Arabia, Oman and the UAE. Aisha also worked at Georgetown University's Center for Contemporary Arab Studies as a visiting scholar.
